DIRECTORATE OF INTELLIGENCE

9 October 1984

Israel: Jewish Industry in the Occupied TerritoriesSummary

Since 1967 more than 300 Jewish-owned and operated industries have located in the Israeli-occupied territories (Golan Heights, Gaza Strip, West Bank, and East Jerusalem). Although the output of these plants is small compared with total Israeli, and even West Bank, industrial production, their ownership and location within the territories gives them a special significance. The as yet undefined legality of US involvement in these industries (including military contracts, purchases of manufactured goods, business investment, and firms locating in the territories) lends added importance to this issue. Israel: Jewish Industry in the Occupied TerritoriesBackground

Israeli Government support for their presence is the prime reason industries have been introduced into the territories. Like settlement housing, and related agriculture, road networks, and electric and water lines, industries are "facts on the land." Israelis who oppose territorial compromise argue that building more permanent structures and infrastructure in the territories will make them harder to give up. Industry also provides nonagricultural settlements with an economic basis, giving further credence to the settlements' existence. [redacted]

To entice industries to the territories, the government has offered subsidies in the form of grants, loans, and cheap land.

[redacted] authorized enterprises beyond the Green Line may receive 40 percent of their financing in loans and 35 percent in grants; only 25 percent is private investment capital. [redacted]

25X1

A second cause for the movement of industries to at least a portion of the territories is the proximity of western Samaria to Israel's expanding industrial agglomeration and markets centered on Tel Aviv.<sup>1</sup> Western Samaria has locational advantages over more distant development areas in the Galilee and the Negev. An example is the Adereth Textile Company, which will gradually shift its spinning facilities from its Herzliyya plant to its new $9 million plant in the Qarne Shomeron Industrial Zone.

25X1

Current Status

Presently, 62 of the 213 residential settlements boast at least one industry (maps and appendix). Of those with no industry, 32 produce some agricultural products, while the remainder have no apparent means of internal economic support besides services. In addition, the territories contain six industrial zones separate from residential settlements--Erez Industrial Zone<sup>2</sup> in the northern Gaza Strip, Qazrin Industrial Zone in the central Golan Heights, 'Atarot Industrial Zone north of Jerusalem, Mishor Adummim Industrial Center east of Jerusalem,

<sup>2</sup> A few of the industries in Erez Industrial Zone are Arab owned. [redacted]

25X1

GI M 84-10155

25X1

and Ari'el and Qarne Shomeron Industrial Zones in Samaria. The industrial zone at Qarne Shomeron has been open for only two years, and the Ari'el Industrial Zone near Barqan remains under construction, but the other four industrial zones, together with the industrial facilities in Qiryat Arba', account for 55 percent of all Jewish industries in the territories. [ ]

25X1

For the most part, these industries are small workshops employing less than 15 workers each. Many are metal or carpentry shops. More recently, however, high-tech industries in such fields as computers, electronics, and optics have located in the territories. These industries take advantage of the settlers' generally high levels of education. [ ]

25X1

Israeli industries in the territories employ approximately 3,500 workers. Of this number, about 2,000 are settlers (about 7 percent of the adult male settler population) and most of the remaining workers are local Arabs. However, because these industries are viewed ideologically as part of the Jewish presence in the territories and are intended to provide work for the settlers, plans call for a reduction in the percentage of Arabs in the work force. At least one settlement--Qedumim--recently prohibited permanent employment of Arabs in its industries. [ ]

Plans

The government five-year plan for 1987 and the 20-year plan for 2015 call for increased industry in the territories. However, unknowns such as the professional profile of the future settler population and changing market and economic priorities make industrialization planning uncertain. In addition, such institutional planning is nonbinding on entrepreneurs. Nevertheless, the plan for 2015 calls for 108,000 workers (21 percent of them Arab) in Israeli industry on the West Bank. The more realistic 1987 plan calls for an increase of 700 employees in the West Bank, half of whom are to be located within settlements established since 1983. [ ]

25X1

The long-range Israeli plan would require massive capital inputs and may be unrealistic based on Israel's current economic problems. Moreover, the plan assumes a continued increase in the settler population, which in itself calls for added investment. Although neither the short-term nor the long-term plans are likely to be met, more Israeli industry will continue to locate beyond the 1967 border as long as the present government policy is maintained. [ ]

25X1

United States Involvement

Under the provisions of the 1979 memorandum of agreement on procurement and cooperative research and development, Israeli firms are authorized to bid competitively on some Department of Defense contracts. Since certain Israeli firms have subsidiaries and subcontractors in the territories, it is possible that certain products and services contracted by the United States Government originate in Israeli industries in the territories. According to the US Embassy in Tel Aviv, in 1983 several parts for the US Army OH58 helicopter were being produced in the 'Atarot Industrial Zone as part of a contract with the Bedek Aviation Division of Israel Aircraft Industries. There are possible legal grounds for prohibiting performance of Department of Defense contracts in the territories, but these have yet to be defined in enforceable regulations. [REDACTED]

25X1

Several American companies have set up subsidiaries in the territories. These include Visco Visual Systems Corp., Makor Chemicals Ltd. (a subsidiary of Sigma Chemical Co., St. Louis), and Wella Intercosma Ltd. (a subsidiary of the Wella Corp., Englewood, New Jersey). The General Bearing Co. plans to establish a machine bearing seals plant in Mishor Adummim Industrial Center. In addition, American firms are investing in Israeli industries in the territories, including Micro-Sab, Ltd., of Allon Shevut and Du-Qeren, Ltd., of Qarne Shomeron. At present, US commercial activity in the territories is not prohibited. However, such activity may be perceived as a form of economic assistance to the settlements, and if publicized, would probably become another sore point with local Arabs and Arab governments. [REDACTED]

Appendix

The following table lists all known Israeli industries in the territories by location. Most of the data have been obtained from field research and open sources, including two Israeli industrial guides. Although this is the most complete listing of its kind available, it is by no means complete. We believe that as many as 80 industries in the settlements with high industrial concentrations--most notably in the Mishor Adummim Industrial Center--may be missing from the list. In addition, even when the sources revealed the products manufactured in many of the smaller settlements, they did not always give specific company names. Finally, as more industries are established in the territories, the listing will require continued updating.
